THE CONSTITUTION, Atlanta, Georgia.

ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 1882

The signal service bureau report indicates for South Atlantic and Gulf states to-day, local rains, cloudy weather, winds mostly from the north to west, stationary rising barometer, and stationary or slight fall in temperature.

In the expressive Georgia dialect, congress "broke" yesterday, and hence repairing will be diligently carried on in the districts.

"He died of a broken heart." Such is the explanation of the demise of General Warren, whose sensitiveness to censurable comment snapped the vital chord. If this sensitiveness were only catching!

The speech of President Hardeman, at the Georgia state agricultural convention, is replete with sound logic and practical advice. To this assemblage of the men who sow and reap the state owes its prosperity, and in their deliberations there is always much interest.

AMERICA is one of those charming little cities a visit to which is never forgotten, and the aroma of whose magnolia groves scent the imagination. Added to its natural charms, it has a citizenship of as hospitable and noble a people as are to be met with anywhere. Its advantages are well told elsewhere.

The British retreat of Saturday is spoken of by the Italian press as a defeat, thinly disguised in the official dispatches. Men are pouring into Alexandria, however, from all the seas, and soon Arabi will have to fall back upon the sands of Soudan, where he may amuse himself at pleasure while the khedive reigns at Cairo.

The reports made to St. Louis merchants are to the effect that such an abundant yield in crops has never been known before. In cotton, the cereals, vegetables and every line of agricultural production the country is certainly favored. The public health is also much better than usual, the absence of epidemic diseases being one of the blessings of the year.

AMONG the names of the world's benefactors must be placed that of Euston. He was an Englishman who, settling in Charleston, amassed a great fortune, and having amassed it, had the heart to dispose of it in such a way as to be a blessing for all time. The little village of aged beneficiaries will be a monument to his name such as more pretensions men have failed to win.

CONGRESS has adjourned, but the tax-gatherer has not, and will not this year. And yet Mr. Kelly, a staunch republican, and chairman of the ways and means committee, thinks the revenue of the government this year will exceed $400,000,000, and that there will be a surplus of $100,000,000. The republicans did not dispute these figures, but they were careful not to reduce the prospective surplus, upon which, no doubt, they have foul designs. This surplus will be taken from the people's earnings, but congress will vote it away as freely as if it were a windfall.

The democratic victories in Alabama and Kentucky do not show any loss of vitality in the party of the people. General O'Neal's opponent in Alabama was supported by republicans, independents and greenbackers, and yet he was defeated by the customary democratic majority of the state. In Kentucky, Captain Henry, the democratic candidate for the court of appeals, was opposed by ex-Lieutenant-Governor Jacob, an independent democrat, who was accepted by the republicans. The coalition did not materially decrease Captain Henry's majority. A straight-out ticket is, as a rule, stronger than a fusion ticket based simply on a desire to exchange places with the party in power.

THE ENGLISH CRISIS.

The house of commons has rejected the amendments of the house of lords to the arrears bill; and if the lords insist upon their amendments a grave issue is forced upon Mr. Gladstone. He cannot accept the amendments, or any similar propositions. The first of the amendments empowers the landlord to refuse his consent to the tenant's application for the discharge of his arrears under the bill in cases where he thought him able to pay the full amount without assistance from the government. This is virtually the same amendment as that which was rejected in the house of commons requiring the landlord to join with the tenant in the application. This would put the tenant wholly in the power of the landlord, giving the latter the option of accepting a part payment of the arrears or of a resort to eviction. The second amendment would have the effect of making the unpaid portion of the arrears a perpetual lien upon the tenant's interest in the holding, as it empowers the landlord to recover the sum of which the bill deprives him out of the proceeds of any subsequent sale of the tenant right.

The object of the arrears bill is to relieve the tenants of an accumulation of rent, and thus lay the foundation for remedial measures and a pacification of the Irish trouble. The bill asks the landlords to remit a part of the arrears on the ground that the state would pay the remainder. The bill is, of course, an extraordinary measure, but it is claimed that it is no more extraordinary than the case calls for. It should be borne in mind that tenants in arrears are denied access to the land courts, and the three years of deficient harvests have put no small part of the tenantry in debt beyond their present or probable ability to discharge. The conservatives have accepted the principle of the bill, but they have taken a stand as to details that would make it a measure of small value—that it would really crush the life out of the remedial legislation that the government has in view. The conservatives are not willing to let the tenants have a fair and full start, and they seem determined to stand by the landlord interest, regardless of the welfare of either Ireland or England itself. Mr. Gladstone has decided to meet the issue squarely. The conservatives will claim, in case of an appeal to the country, that English farmers would be taxed under the arrears bill to pay the rents of Irish tenants, and if the Irish church fund is not sufficient, this point would have some foundation to rest upon; but still the government proposes to test the patriotism and good sense of the people. It will rely upon the fact that the Irish questions can only be peacefully solved by extraordinary relief, and that the arrears bill is as little as the circumstances admit of. If the house of lords insists upon its amendments, not only will the question of relief for the suffering tenants be brought up, but also a bill to enlarge the franchise, and incidentally the need of a house of lords at all. In case of an appeal to the country it is believed the dissolution of parliament will take place in December.

THE END OF THE SESSION.

The republicans, after much pretense and humbuggery in relation to a reduction of taxation, finally adjourned congress, and their record of extravagance and high taxation is made up. The long session brought no relief to the people, although it had before it a bushel of bills and resolutions. The house left behind it a calendar of some seventy pages, consisting of three divisions, namely, the house calendar proper, the calendar of the committee of the whole, and the private calendar. On the house calendar there remained at the end of the session 125 bills; on the calendar of the committee of the whole 230 bills, and on the private calendar over 400 bills. Besides these there were left on the speaker's table about 200 bills. During the session 7,182 bills and resolutions were introduced in the house. Of this immense number 803 were reported favorably, 245 unfavorably, and the remainder, 6,134, remain in the hands of the various committees. 303 bills and resolutions passed the house, but much the greater part of the number consisted of pension bills or measures of local interests such as grants of condemned cannon for soldiers' monuments and the like. Two hundred and eighty-one of these measures had become laws, and forty-one more were on Monday morning awaiting the president's approval.

In the senate 2,283 bills and joint resolutions were introduced, and 466 passed. There remains upon the senate calendar about 100 senate bills and joint resolutions, and 71 house bills and resolutions, all of which will have to take their chances at the next session. Aside from regular annual appropriation bills, the two bodies in a session extending from the first Monday in December to the second Tuesday in August, passed about 170 bills and joint resolutions. This is the joint outcome of all their wisdom, and perhaps it is well that the number of bills that become laws was so small. One hundred and seventy out of a total of nearly 9,000 bills, shows, however, that there was a very great waste of effort and white paper.

Congress had time to pass a bill "to regulate" the friendless Mormons, but it had no time to revise that bundle of rascality and folly, the tariff. It had no time to give to a bankrupt act, but plenty of time for the consideration of jobs to erect public buildings, improve trout streams and swell the income of pension agents. It had time to vote away seventy-nine millions more than last year, and one hundred and ten millions more than the year before that, but no time whatever to give to the promotion of our flag on the high seas; none to the extension of our foreign trade; none to the relief of the people from burdensome and unnecessary taxation. As soon as all jobs were secured it was ready to adjourn without day, and it did so adjourn last evening. It will go down to history as a profligate and shameless body. The house, led by the fool speaker, Keifer, and Robeson, spent its time in unseemly demagogues and wasting the public money, the proceedings being almost daily enlivened by personal quarrels, obscene allusions and vile denunciations. The senate was even more extravagant than the house. There was no check anywhere; and eighty millions of the hard earnings of the people will this year, as the net result of congressional action, go into the pockets of jobbers, or be expended in aid of individuals or local interests. The eight months of wrangling was almost wholly unproductive of useful legislation, and the ridiculous tariff commission is a fair sample of the work of the session.

TRUCK FARMING IN MIDDLE GEORGIA.

In Mr. Grady's record of his observations in North Carolina, printed in THE CONSTITUTION of Sunday last, mention is made of the progress and improvement of truck farming in that state, together with some pointed suggestions relative to the possibilities of this comparatively new business in Georgia. In this connection there is one important point we desire to impress upon our readers, or such of them as live within easy reach of transportation facilities, and that is, that a truck garden to be profitable need not be situated in the suburbs of a city, nor yet in the southern or southwestern portions of the state. To be sure, a truck garden in the suburbs of a city can be made wonderfully profitable provided it is managed in accordance with ordinary business principles; and certainly the southern and southwestern sections of Georgia have a material advantage in point of earliness; but it is easily possible to organize a profitable truck farm, which shall be neither in the latitude of extreme earliness nor within hearing of a city.

We have in mind a gentleman in Monroe county, one of the most successful farmers in the state, and whose success as a gardener, although it has been the talk of his neighbors, has been quite incidental. During the present season, he has been supplying several Atlanta acquaintances with vegetables, but rather and other et ceteras of a well managed farm. Rather, we should say, he began to supply several friends. His acquaintance in this particular has steadily extended, and he has been able to dispose of all his supplies at rather better prices than they would fetch if huddled together in a suburban wagon or displayed in front of a retail shop; and this notwithstanding the fact that he lives several miles from the railroad.

This means that there is an inexhaustible demand for fresh garden truck and household supplies. Taking the Atlanta market alone, it would be no exaggeration to say that there has not been a day during the present season—or any other season, for that matter—when the demand for fresh vegetables, fresh butter, fresh milk and fresh eggs, has been even tolerably supplied. This is owing to the fact that the business of truck farming, so far as middle Georgia is concerned, is in an experimental condition. It will speedily settle into a system, but there need be no fear that the demand will ever be fully met. It is not the demand in Atlanta alone that is to be supplied, but the demand of the whole west and northwest that are to be supplied. The facilities of transportation already in operation will tend to carry all the products of southern Georgia to the north and east, leaving the great markets of the west and north to be supplied by middle Georgia, which has very greatly the advantage so far as reaching a market is concerned.

It is a fact which our people should bear in mind that middle Georgia is within four hundred miles of the centre of population, and within a very short time this whole section will enjoy the advantage of double daily trains to Cincinnati. This gives our truck farmers the choice of a dozen markets, and places their products within reach of a demand that cannot be supplied. There is not a farmer in middle Georgia, who, by the exercise of a little energy, cannot reap the benefits that are thus offered. There need be no extensive outlay, and very little additional expense. In the first place, those who intend to engage in truck farming, even on a small scale, should, through their local merchants, select reliable agents in the west who will undertake to dispose of their products to the best advantage.

These arrangements having been made, the farmer should then pitch his crop for those vegetables that are easily raised, that develop early, that will bear transportation and for which there is a never failing demand. Cabbages and Irish potatoes may be said to form the basis of truck farming in this section. They constitute the most reliable crops, and the demand for them is never exhausted. They can be grown in middle Georgia so as to reach the west almost as early in the season as those which go from Florida and south Georgia to the north and east. Cucumbers and the like are no doubt profitable below the frost line, but those who engage in truck farming in middle Georgia will find it more profitable to raise cabbages and Irish potatoes.

Irish potatoes in this section come to maturity—a delightful maturity it is, too, six weeks earlier than in the west, and during six weeks the Western appetite yearns after them with a yearning that knows no abatement. There was probably not a dealer in Atlanta able to supply the orders that came from the western markets, and for several weeks prices ruled at $2 a bushel. We have heard of one shipper who could have found a ready market in the west for two carloads a day, and what is true of one shipper is true in a measure of all. The demand for early Irish potatoes in the west was never supplied during the season, and it will not be supplied next season though every farmer who reads THE CONSTITUTION should plant an acre or more.

We trust that some sort of a beginning may be made in this direction by the planters of middle Georgia. Let it be experimental and incidental only, so that there will be no danger of loss. We feel that we have made an awkward presentation of the facts and possibilities of the situation. There is a great demand in the west and northwest for such vegetables as our farmers can grow cheaply and in abundance. We have ample transportation facilities, and all that is necessary is a little extra energy on the part of the farmers.

REGRADED AND DEGRADED COTTON.

Upon more than one occasion recently, THE CONSTITUTION has contended that the outcry which has been raised in some of the northern markets and in England in regard to sanded and falsely packed cotton has very little to back it. We have shown that the sand and trash which may be in the bale are due to loose methods and imperfect machinery, rather than to any desire on the part of the cotton planter to add to the weight of his crop. We have shown, moreover, that those who buy on account of the mills are not at all careful as to grades and samples, the mills finding it more profitable to work up degraded cotton. The editor of the Boston Journal of Commerce, discussing this matter, says:

We sometimes buy one or two bales of sample cotton. Samples are sometimes put up in five hundred to a thousand bale lots, not all on the same day, and parties who make a business of this buy and ship it. The samples contain, as the old ante-bellum saying was, "rag, tag and bobtail," in other words, everything from everywhere, and a good deal of it which would make first-class wadding, carpet packing or lining. This is sold to some man who wants to keep down the price of his cotton, only to turn up in some northern mill or some English mill for that matter. Instead of being a straight lot, there are no five pounds in any bale which will class with five pounds in its fellow bale, or five pounds from one bale will net class at all with five pounds from the middle or other end of the same.

The editor, in the same connection, says that another sharp practice frequently indulged in, is by persons at the north who buy cotton on contract, the price being, for instance, 11½ in Boston for a certain grade of cotton delivered. The person who is to deliver on contract, finding the market is 11½, telegraphs a cotton factor or broker in the south to "split the grade." This factor takes five grades from one lot—a lot too good for one mill and not quite good enough for finer mills—and sends print cotton to Fall River and the "split grades" laid out for the contract delivery man, and the full up grades laid out for the Boston order for fine goods. The editor of the Journal of Commerce concludes thus:

Here is a man, then, endeavoring to make up a mixed lot of fifty or a hundred bales by "splitting the grade," trying to grade cotton down to an eighth of a cent a pound, or perhaps less, in order to share some other man out of the brokerage on cotton by contracting to deliver in Boston a grade of cotton which does not exist, and ordering his buyer or factor in the south to split hairs in order to allow him to carry on what may be honest, but what, in our opinion, is not. Cases exactly like this have occurred within the last fifteen days, and one in which this northern house, after having dene this, was caught in selling the cotton in three or four different lots at a profit of $150 or $160, and then making a recantation upon their own buyer for $1 per bale. Names can be given if necessary.

The Columbus Times appears to be laboring under the impression that because Brown, a colored man, manifested a desire to take off his coat in Colonel Farlow's presence, he intended to stuff the white brother. This is a very curious conclusion. After a while some of the sensitive white republicans leaders will have the colored brother arrested if he appears in public with a palmetto fan.

It is said that when some one mentioned Jute in the presence of the tariff commission shortly after it organized, that able body was compelled to go into executive session and examine the dictionary. A majority of the members thought that Jute was connected with the engines of the driving-wheel of a soda water machine.

For the benefit of a correspondent at Cartersville, we would state that Mr. Stephens thoroughly understands and appreciates to their fullest extent the scope and meaning of Mr. Felton's recent speech. Meanwhile, let our correspondent exercise a little patience.

We beg to remind our esteemed northern contemporaries that the republican party in Georgia has two straight tickets in the field. Does this look like the democrats are in the habit of using slant-bank arguments in this political vineyard.

The adjournment of Congress leaves Robeson rather lonesome. He will no longer have an opportunity of airing his knavery in front of the public. For Robeson, this will be a great deprivation.

GENERAL GARRETT has not yet declared which of the two republican tickets he proposes to advocate. There is no principle involved in this. It is simply a choice between two rare bouquets.

The young men of Henderson county, Texas, appear to be making arrangements to join the republican party. They have already robbed a number of stores and ravished a young lady.

It is one of the drawbacks inseparable from a republican form of government that a man like Robeson can use the word "honest" as freely as a person of respectability.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Bayard will lose no time in tuning his voice to the proper pitch. In the senate, as a general thing, a man's voice ought to be as big as a freight depot.

It is supposed that John Sherman will herd his Louisiana witnesses in Ohio until after the next election. John invariably has an eye to business.

COLONEL FARLOW has probably come to the conclusion that the syndicate he got exclusively to the shipplian party. The colonel is correct.

A QUORUM of the republican party will probably meet at Hot Springs before the season is over.

AFTER the lower, there was no great amount of mourning over the two thirds rule.

WHAT has Editor Gorham done with his man Mahone?

STATE POLITICS.

Albert J. Talmage is mentioned for representative of Jasper. He is an educated mechanic.

The Griffin Sun predicts a very cool campaign on the part of those democrats who have not imbibed the Jeffersonian enthusiasm.

The Cartersville American rises to remark that "Mr. Stephens's election seems to be one of the certainties set down for October."

ST. FEAGIN and W. A. WILSON solicit the support of the people of Sumter for representative. Mr. Feagin was in the last legislature, and Mr. Wilson is the county school commissioner.

Thomas county proposes, says the Times, to support Mr. Turner in the convention, and then to give him a counter-vote at the polls. His return to congress is everywhere conceded.

Mr. Haines declined to stay in the Laurens section, and the contest between Colonel Gayton and Mr. Burch was decided in Laurens last Saturday. The result of the primaries has not, however, reached us.

Of Colonel Black's candidacy in the first congressional district the Waynesboro True Citizen says:

"That he should be his own successor, we believe is now the feeling and sentiment of an overwhelming majority of the people from one end of the district to the other; and we could wish that Colonel Black might have no opposition whatever. From his own party, at least, he certainly should have none. Burke will undoubtedly send a solid delegation for him to the convention; and as far as we can learn other counties will do likewise. The only inquiry heretofore, has been concerning his health; and since that matter seems now put at rest, we presume he will be nominated, if not elected, without any practical opposition. And his nomination means, of course his re-election; for Colonel Black's justly and deservedly popular with all classes wherever he is known."

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

HON. R. J. POWELL, of Barnesville, is stopping at the Kimball.

HON. JOHN F. TROTTERMAN, of Houston county, is at the Markham.

It is very unlikely that Mr. Boutwell will succeed in his scheme of succeeding Mr. Hoar in the senate.

GENERAL LOGAN'S left hand cannot guess whose right hand desires to have elected to the senate. Meeting a Jackal, he saw nothing to be gained, without any practical opposition. And his nomination means, of course his re-election; for Colonel Black's justly and deservedly popular with all classes wherever he is known."

JUDG TAYLOR, who succeeded General Garfield as the congressional representative of the Sixteenth Ohio district, will be re-nominated without opposition.

CARDINAL MAXIM has just entered upon his seventy-fifth year. His health is still vigorous. On the day following his recent birthday he preached two sermons and officiated in three different churches.

It is stated on good authority that Prince Nicholas, eldest son of the Duke Constantine, and cousin of the czar, together with several eminent members of the Russian nobility, are implicated in the confession of the nihilist Kyrilloff.

ANNA DICKERSON, it is said, made a pat remark when somebody deprecated her playing the man's part of Hamlet. "Yes," said she; "but there are not three men in the country who can play it, and it is the woman's right."

DANIEL SARGENT is on a scale of elegance and magnificence hitherto unknown, and the exposition of finery in the evenings is a sight to behold. The wonder is where all the money comes from to pay for the profusion of gowns and laces.

The members of the Garibaldi family have erected over the tomb of the general a large granite monument weighing four tons. The tomb is watched day and night. The decision as to the final resting place is left to parliament, which inclines to the Janiculum.

MISS MAMIE HATCHETT, the North Carolina young lady about whom Messrs. Addison and Garret recently fought a duel, which resulted in the former's death, lived at Sassafras Fork. The young men in the case seemed to have resided on bitter creek, pretty well up the stream.

honored her before the world with as much loyalty as if she had been of the noblest blood.

HON. PHOCOR KNOTT retires at the close of this congress, and will be a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Kentucky. He has had numerous assurances of support, and his prospects of obtaining the nomination are said to be excellent. Mr. Knott came here as a representative in 1858, and his period of public service in Washington is only equaled by some two or three of his political associates. Mr. Beck and he were elected members of the house at the same time, but Mr. Beck retired from the house some years before he was chosen senator. Mr. Knott has been warmly sustained at every election by his constituents, and has been an influential leader of his party in congress.

M. DE LEBESGUES has always more or less of the theatrical about him. He is fond of paradoxes, being himself a noteworthy natural paradox, for he is on the verge of eighty, still retaining the physical vigor and the curbless energy of youth. His attitude as now reported is certainly melodramatic. He singly stands out against the English, prohibits their navy from patrolling the seas, and threatens to call to his assistance a tribe of Bedouins should his orders be disobeyed. His conditions are doubtless good enough, but there is a chance that his inter-meddling may complicate matters that danger which he wishes to avert will break out. Individuals in the Egyptian troubles will do more harm than good.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The One Hope.

The position of the respectable element of the republican party, with Mahone omnipotent in the senate and Keifer and Robeson in the house, reminds us of the experience of the young doctor with his first case in obstetrics. He will be remembered, lost the mother and the child, but with a Washington is only equalled by some two or three of his political associates. Mr. Beck and he were elected members of the house at the same time, but Mr. Beck retired from the house some years before he was chosen senator. Mr. Knott has been warmly sustained at every election by his constituents, and has been an influential leader of his party in congress.

A Golden Year.

The country to day presents a most encouraging outlook, and it is anticipated that the present year will be the most prosperous in the history of the republic. The crops are unusually promising, and there is every prospect of a golden harvest of corn, wheat, rye and oats. The orchards are laden with fruit until the boughs bend and occasionally break. The tobacco plants stand strong and spread wide, and the cotton bushes are filled with healthy and swelling bolls. Look where you will, and on every side a hundred evidences and promises of future plenty meet the view. Grain and vegetables and fruit are all abundant. Every head and ear and foot and root, every tree, stalk and shoot, has been touched by a bountiful hand and will yield this year a rich return.

The Country Redcoats.

Congress is on the eve of a great service to the country—adjournment.

Washington Post.

Congress has the most cheerful consent of fifty millions of people for immediate adjournment in order that silence, like a poultice, may come down on the country to heal the blows of sound.

St. Louis Republican.

If congress should hastily adjourn within the next two weeks will the country feel safe in the hands of the tariff commission for a couple of months? Society is becoming intensely excited over the proceedings at Long Branch.

Baltimore Day.

In all probability the first session of the Forty-seventh congress will end to-night. It will pass into history as one of the most barren, corrupt and altogether vicious sessions that has yet been recorded in the annals of American legislation.

The General Outlook.

For governor, General L. J. Garrett, of Atlanta, will be supported by the united republicans against Mr. Stephens, and he will look for democratic aid, as he still claims to be a democrat. He has been popular in his party and, though a candidate before the democratic conventions of 1876 and 1880, failed to secure half-a-dozen counties in either election. What democratic votes he can obtain, and they are few, will be more than offset by the suffrage of colored republicans, among whom Mr. Stephens has always been popular, and from whom in his district he has generally received support. In the latter locality he will be awarded a vote of a majority of this class, and will be overwhelming. At all events the opposition to the Georgia democracy within the state is dead—very dead. Anybody at all conversant with politics therein certainly feels no surprise at the result, as Georgia is the very last state in all the south in which a comparison can be made between so many sturdy democratic communities, which would for a moment countenance Mahoneism without a protest. But it is clearly in order just at this time for those republican newspapers and politicians who were so recently prophesying that the "Georgia bootleggers" were hopelessly divided and that the "liberals" would sweep the state to come forward and tell an anxious country what way is the other fellow's waistband which gave way.

THE WOLF AS A REFORMER.

One day a Wolf who had been pondering deeply for whole weeks started out on a walk through the Forest. Meeting a Jackal, he saw nothing to be gained, without any practical opposition. And his nomination means, of course his re-election; for Colonel Black's justly and deservedly popular with all classes wherever he is known."

"My Friend, pause for a little while I give you a few words of advice. You are a cross, snarling creature, hated by men and despised by all the Creatures of the Forest. Let me hope that you will mend your ways and reform."

"Ho! ho! but you are a pretty specimen to give me advice!" sneered the Jackal. "Why, it isn't a month since you devoured an old woman and chased a Professor of Eloquence into the River."

The Wolf passed on until he met a Hyena. By that time he had recovered his check, and he worked up a sad, sweet smile and observed:

"My dear Mr. Hyena, you would be an ornament to society if you would cut your nails and clean your teeth. Let me hope that you will cease your deprecations and become an honest, conscientious animal."

"My friend, I feel it my duty to advise you to quit stealing spring chickens and get your living lawfully. Show me the words that you will be wiser to be good and respectable and you will soon be beloved and honored."

DR. T. WILSON, OF NEW YORK.

Many inaccuracies having occurred as to the early life and career of the gentleman whose name heads this article, some of which have appeared in the columns of this paper, we take pleasure in publishing the following, which has been furnished us by a gentleman who has known him from boyhood.

He was born in Hall county, Ga. His father was a thrifty, well-to-do farmer, and one of the influential men of the neighborhood. R. T. Wilson developed an early aptitude for study, and was given such an education as to qualify him for business of a commercial character. His father died before he was grown, and at the age of eighteen he entered a mercantile house in Dalton, Ga., as a clerk, in which capacity he remained for nearly two years, and then began business on his own account as a merchant in Dalton, Tenn. He remained there until he was twenty, when he removed to Louisville, Ky., where he continued and enlarged his business until it grew to be the largest in that part of the state. It was here that he married Miss Johnson, daughter of a wealthy planter. After his marriage Mr. Wilson continued to live in Tennessee until just before the war, when he removed to Louisville, Ky., where he established a business house there in addition to his establishment in Tennessee. The outbreak of the war he returned to his old home in Tennessee, and a few years after he went to New York and opened a banking house, which he now conducts. The writer has known him from his boyhood quite intimately with Mr. Wilson as well as with the family into which he married, having spent many pleasant days at their attractive and hospitable home. He had the pleasure of attending Mr. W.'s wedding, and all of the pleasant episodes and memories of his youthfulness in this country are too indelibly impressed to be forgotten in the least particular.

The above, as we state, is from one who is well acquainted with Mr. Wilson, and we endorse every word of it. There is no man who stands higher with Georgians at home and abroad than Mr. Wilson, and his friend, who gives this statement of his early history, is better able to speak of it than any living man. Mr. Wilson's prominence in business matters has made him the subject of frequent newspaper comment, and as facts have been published about his early life by parties who were wholly unacquainted with it, it was deemed a duty of justice that the truth should be written by his friend.

SIXTY FEET PLUNGE.

THAT IS WHAT A NORTHEASTERN PASSENGER TRAIN MADE.

An Excursion Train Goes Down an Embankment, but no One Gets Killed—Several Persons Injured—A Miraculous Escape from Death—The Heroism of the Passengers.

Night before last an accident occurred on the Northeastern railroad, two miles from Clarksville, which, for miraculous escape from instant and terrible death, has no equal. The train was composed of ten passenger coaches and was drawn by a large engine. It was loaded to its utmost capacity with ladies and children and gentlemen, who had been spending the day at Tullulah, and who were en route home after a pleasant time at the falls.

Mr. John Dunlap, of Atlanta, was the engineer, and when he left Rabun Gap Junction night had settled itself over the earth, and knowing the value of the load he was drawing he strained his energies to carry it through safe, and had.

AT THE FALLS. The accident happened down to a safe speed when the engine happened. Two miles from Clarksville and about seven from Rabun Gap Junction there is a high trestle which is approached from either side by a high embankment. The embankment on the left side from which the train was approaching the trestle is covered considerably, and here it was that the accident occurred. The engineer had taken up his speed and was approaching the high wood-work at a slow pace, when the engine suddenly left the track and plunged down the embankment, about sixty feet high. In its descent the engine turned completely over, and when it settled upon the ground the tender rested upon it. On top of the tender was a passenger coach, and upon this coach another, and another, until five coaches rested their weight upon the tender, while the fifth coach of the train stood partly upon the track.

Each of the passenger coaches was full of ladies and small children, and as the coaches went down the noise of the heavy timbers as they snapped in two, were drowned by their cries and groans. To those who were in the coaches which did not leave the track, it was evident that some GREAT ACCIDENT HAD HAPPENED and in an instant every car was cleared and there by the light of the burning timbers below the cause of the sudden fall was ascertained. Fortunately there were many strong arms and brave hearts aboard the train, and instantly quite a number had descended the embankment to rescue their friends from their perilous position and probably death. It was soon found, however, that no one had been killed and that only a few persons had been injured. The car which was next to the tender had been driven half through as it fell upon it, and was on fire, but only one of its occupants was hurt. The second car was also badly broken, and it was in this coach that the greatest number of persons were injured. The third and fourth cars were only slightly injured.

WHO WAS HURT. When the casualties had been ascertained the passengers rejoiced at their escape. Mr. John Dunlap, the engineer, was badly injured about the back and shoulders and is in a dangerous condition, but the physicians are sanguine of his recovery.

Mr. Davis, the fireman, whose home is in Central, S. C., was hurt about the head and shoulders, but not seriously. Mr. Polot, of Athens, who was familiar with the road, and who was riding on the engine for the purpose of acquainting the engineer with the curves and grades, was slightly hurt about the legs. A brakeman was somewhat injured in the face, and a train hand had both legs broken—one below the other above the knee. Of the passengers only four or five were hurt, and none of them seriously. Mrs. O'Farrell and Mrs. Jones, of Athens, received the most severe injuries and they escaped with a few bruises and scratches about the head and face. In fact the injuries sustained were very slight except in those of the train hand and possibly the engineer.

THE CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT. These who were present and who are cognizant of all the facts can assign no cause for the accident. The road is a new one, and at the point where the engine left the track there is a six degree curve. It is thought that the outside track at this curve sank so much that the drive wheels possibly broke and the train then jumped it, and that the track spread, causing the engine to leave the rails. After leaving the rails the engine passed over only a half dozen ties before it began its descent. The track for quite a distance was terribly torn up, but by a squad of hands cleared it within four hours and relaid about fifty feet of track.

The train was an excursion by the Pioneer Hook and Ladder company of Athens, and left Tullulah at 7 o'clock in the evening, and had gone but sixteen miles when the accident happened. It required one hour and twenty minutes to make that distance. Until the passengers were taken away yesterday morning they received every possible attention the officials of the road could give.

Shot in the Hand. Yesterday afternoon Dick Reynolds, a darky who lives on Porter street, was assaulted by a dog which he attempted to kill, but when Dick drew his pistol from his pocket the weapon went off and the ball, which was intended for the dog, buried itself in Dick's left hand, inflicting an ugly and disagreeable wound.

Before the Commissioner. A. B. Miller, of Gwinnett county, was before Commissioner W. B. Smith yesterday charged with retailing whiskey without license. He waived a preliminary examination and gave bond for his appearance. Daniel Glenn, of Campbell county, was held in a bond for his appearance to answer a charge of illicit retailing. Abe Cobb, of Fulton county, was held in a bond of one hundred dollars for his appearance before the district court to answer a charge of retailing whiskey without license.

The City Court. Judge Richard H. Clark presided in the city court yesterday and disposed of the following business: State vs. Lucinda Brown, larceny from the house; plea guilty and sentence of $50 or three months. State vs. Earnest White, larceny from the house; verdict not guilty. State vs. William McEwen, larceny from the house; verdict not guilty. Both of these defendants were under ten years of age. Rule absolute in the case of A. H. Colquitt, governor, etc. vs. H. A. Garvin and Hiram Edwards, security. Court adjourned to meet to-day to hear motions. The case of the State against Edward McCandless, charged with rowdiness W. L. Clarke, editor of the Republic, was postponed until the September term.

A Rope, a Negro and a Cal. Yesterday afternoon a negro man attempted to sell a fine, large calf to a butcher on Washington street for eight dollars. The apparent value of the calf so much exceeded the price asked that the butcher was induced to think that the darkey's right thereto was questionable, and he declined to close the trade, but for Officers Culbertson and Glover, who were on duty in that ward, and made known to them the facts in the case. After a brief investigation of the case, the officers decided to arrest the darkey, who gave his name as Frank Jackson, and who is now in the station-house.

One Look at Rich's! I take pleasure in informing my friends that I am now permanently located at the well known dry goods house of M. Rich & Co., and shall be glad to see all my old friends and as many new ones as will favor me with their patronage. Sincerely, D. H. Dougherty. 211 aug 6-1w 1stcol 7p

Tate Springs.

One of the most delightful places in the country to spend the summer is at Tate Springs. The management of the springs is splendid and the hotel fare is excellent.

Messrs. Tomlinson and Ragsdale certainly know how to manage a summer resort. The medicinal qualities of the water are such as to induce many to go there for the benefits that may be secured.

Inspecting the Convicts.

Mr. J. R. Towers, of the penitentiary department, returned yesterday from an inspecting tour to the camps in north Georgia. He says that there is very little sickness among the convicts, and that everything is in trim shape. He also states that Major West, of the Cedarhurst camp, is building a new stockade which he intends shall eclipse anything of the kind now in the state.

A Pleasant Anniversary.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. G. Saloshin celebrated their 25th anniversary of the wedding at their home, 85½ Whitehall street. There were present a large number of their friends, who congratulated them upon the happy wedded life they have spent and who expressed sincere wishes for a continuation of the same. Mr. and Mrs. Saloshin's guest enjoyed the elegant supper which had been prepared for them.

Run Over.

Yesterday morning Frankie Stone, a thirteen year old white child who resides with her parents, on Larkin street, was run over by a dray near her home and seriously injured. The child was playing in the middle of the street when a dray driver came along at a rapid rate, and before she could escape the mule had knocked her down and the wagon passed over both legs, breaking the right one just below the knee.

Repairing the State House.

The last session of the legislature appropriated ten thousand dollars for repairs on the capitol. Yesterday the work was commenced under the direction of Messrs. Fay & Eichberg, the architects. Scaffolding was erected on the southern side of the building preparatory to the commencement of the work. The entire state roof will be taken off and put on again to remedy numerous leaks.

The rear wall will be repaired in such a way as to make the building more secure. All the outer walls are to be repainted and penciled, and the iron columns will be repainted so that the building will look like a new one. Plastering is to be done wherever it is necessary, and the inside walls will be kalsomined, and it may be that the building will be recarpeted before the work is ended. The cost will be several thousand dollars.

The Insurance Companies.

There are forty-five insurance companies authorized to carry on business in Georgia under the laws of the state. Each company has deposited in the state treasury vaults bonds to the value of twenty-five thousand dollars. The returns for the year ending in April made to the comptroller general show losses to the amount of $1,073,383.34, a very small difference. Probably the heaviest losses at any one time were occasioned by the Block fire in Atlanta last winter, when the losses amounted to about three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The Georgia Home shows a loss, the premiums for the year being $55,385.38 against losses to the amount of $65,388.79. The Southern Mutual, another Georgia company, shows remarkably handsome profits, having taken in $228,975.00, against losses to the amount of $95,768.33.

FAST TRAINS.

The Georgia Road and the Central Propose to Put on Fast Trains.

The Georgia railroad will soon put on a fast schedule that will astonish the natives. The road proposes to run a train from Atlanta to Augusta in five hours and a half, to connect with a fast train going to be run from Augusta to Charleston, which will make the trip in ten hours. There will be a stop of about half an hour at Augusta, which, with the time that will be lost at the other stopping places, will make the speed of the trains about forty miles per hour. The road is in fine condition, and being one of the oldest in the state, it is a condition to render washouts rare. It is thought, therefore, that the Georgia road, with its connections, can get up a very fine winter route for northern travel. The route will be from Atlanta to Augusta, and from there by Branchville, Kingsville, Wilmington, Richmond, and Washington. Passengers who desire can go by the Bay line and up to Baltimore. A fast schedule will also be run on the north and south trip. The trains from the north will probably reach Atlanta at 12:30 p. m., while the outgoing trains will leave at 2:30 p. m., in time to make close connections with the trains reaching Atlanta about noon. The Georgia railroad company is now having engines overhauled for these trains and cars are now being constructed. The fast schedule will go into effect about the first of October.

WHAT THE CENTRAL WILL DO.

A CONSTITUTION reporter called on Mr. Schmidt, of the Central, in order to ascertain what that road intended to do in reference to fast mails. Mr. Schmidt informed the reporter that he was not ready to talk, but that he was willing to say that the fall fast schedule would be put on the Central that

"THE FIRST DEAD REBEL."

What Major Ansel says of the Particulars of the Snake Biting.

Major D. H. Ansel, who is now figuring so prominently in the papers as the first to meet his death in the confederate army. In reply to a request for the particulars of the man's death, Major Ansel said to a Constitution reporter: "Yes, I knew Perkins, the man to whom you refer. I went to the war as a first lieutenant in the Clinch rifles from Augusta. We were at Pensacola, Florida. I was going over to the navy yard one day when I met Perkins, who had a little snake in his hands. He was holding the snake by the tail. It was reaching up its head and biting him on the back of the hand. It looked like a garter snake. I asked him if he was not afraid to let the snake bite him. He said that he was not; that it was only a garter snake. The snake was not more than a foot and a half in length. Perkins went on to camp. He went into his tent, and was not found until the poison had taken hold of his system. The snake proved to be a species of cobra, and that evening the man died. The snake was sent to Augusta and preserved in alcohol. In explanation of the man's conduct I can say that the man had boarded in Augusta with Dr. Deering who was a snake fancier, and his familiarity with the snakes there had made him bolder than he otherwise would have been. He was mistaken in the species of the snake."

From the Great Drug House of the Northwest.

CHICAGO July 14th, 1882.

We do not hesitate to say that for a year past we have sold more of your Swift's Specific than all other blood purifiers combined, and with most astonishing results. One gentleman who used half a dozen bottles says that it has done him more good than treatment which cost him $1,000. Another who had used it for a serious affection reports a permanent cure from its use. Yours truly,

HOT SPRINGS, ARK., July 17th, 1882.

I have had what my physicians termed occasional or over eight years and came five years ago to this place to live in order that I might be cured. During that time I energetically applied all the healing art of the physicians here (both internal and external) in connection with the celebrated Thermae Hot Baths, and in addition have taken more than a hundred bottles of various medicines without the desired result. Up to three months ago I had almost believed my case incurable, and began taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) with all the skepticism possible, although the eruption was at first worse, yet there were some signs of improvement, and after three months use of S. S. S. I am sound and well, not a sign of the eruption, my skin smooth and clear. I find my general health as good as it ever was and there are any doubting ones, let them write to me here.

A MILITARY REUNION.

The Colored National Military Reunion at Columbus, Ohio.
Great preparations are being made at Columbus, Ohio, for the colored military reunion, which is to take place in that city on the 14th of August. It is estimated that 5,000 colored volunteers, the majority of whom will be from the south, will be in the grand parade.

Among the companies which will be present
on that occasion will be the Georgia Cadets, of Atlanta, Captain Moses Bentley
commanding, and Lieutenants Patterson, Jones and Cabiness. The company will consist of thirty men, and will leave Atlanta on the morning of the 13th. The authorities of the Georgia Pacific company, Grant Wilkins and several other large employers, have granted permission to their employees, who are members of the company, to go.
The Cadets will make a creditable showing for the colored men of Atlanta. Captain Bentley will to-day call on the business men of the city for some aid to the company.

A Runaway's Return.
Walter Withers, a thirteen-year old son of Mr. Walter Withers, an esteemed citizen of Atlanta, has been making some tours of the country without warning, as well as without permission. These tours commenced about four months ago, and covered the upper part of Georgia and portions of adjoining states.
The young prodigal has had some narrow escapes from death while taking deck passage on stock cars. He was on the train which was wrecked at Kingston, and was taken off the engine a few minutes before the smash up, which resulted in the death of Engineer West. About two weeks ago he went to Louisville and on Monday he returned from that city repentant, and, he says, ready to stay at home.

A Brilliant Lecture.
Mr. Hills quite astonished his many friends last night by his brilliant lecture, while strangers were surprised to learn that he was not a professional. His lecture was full of wit, humor and pathos. How tenderly and with so much grace did he pass from one to the other. His voice was good. Having the mimic quality developed to a high degree, the negro, Irishman, Dutchman and yankee were handled with equal freedom and skill. To Messrs. Kruger and Wurm sincere thanks are due for their charming music which they so kindly furnished, adding greatly to the evening's entertainment.

A Pretty Picture.
Every visitor to the exposition will remember the beautiful exhibit made by the Tolson, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. The exhibit was arranged in such an artistic manner, as to command universal attention.
Yesterday Mr. Jack W. Johnson, of this city, sent to the exposition a handsome colored picture of the exhibit. The picture is from Mr. A. S. Johnson, land commissioner of the road.

Seriously Sick.
Last night, about 12 o'clock, an old man named Asa Smith, from Gwinnett county, was taken suddenly and seriously ill, at Robert's wagon yard, on Decatur street. A commotion was created among the countrymen who were with him, and a runner was sent for a physician. Dr. Cofer was found and soon relieved the old man's suffering.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

At the expiration of Alderman Beermann's term of office, the south side of the railroad will have no immediate representative in the aldermanic board, as there are two of the ones holding office from the north side. Justice demands that Alderman Beermann's successor should be from the south side of old Atlanta, and they present the name of that old, tried public spirited citizen, Major John H.
McCaslin, as a suitable man to fill the place and the will be supported by the whole people of Atlanta.

"THE LEADER OF LOW PRICES"

THE MODERN WOMAN.

Her Family, Folks, and Good Traits.

We are often afflicted with the introduction of the topic of the modern woman whose chief burden and refrain "long drawn out, is a depreciation of her attainments. Her so called follies are held up to the meretricious gaze of the listener. She is described as a senseless creature, and is caricatured for her love of dress, her affectation of art, her shopping propensities, and a thousand other faults and follies, which too often receive the smiles of the glib, while on the other hand, the true woman, who is the backbone of the family, able to express disapprobation of the unjust photograph so ostentatiously handed around as
"the true and original."

How this world is given to romancing—is clearly ascertainable by examining the background lists of her inefficiencies which are handed about from mouth to mouth with persistent ascription as the clouds of dust are driven on a hot, dry summer day. Her waste of time has been the theme of many pen that might have been better engaged in following her illustrious example of doing nothing.
She is criticised for her frequent prome-nades down town, and the critic does not seek an explanation, but she is not to be deterred by the criticism. She is a creature of mercy will not be much strained if we say he deserves no explanation, when it is known that she will tell him more on her return than he had the wit to discover. In these apparent wasted hours "shopping through the windows" and observing the costumes of the passers-by, she carries home in that silly cranium of hers a knowledge that saves the head of the family at least $20.

Her love of dress!—an indication often awakening of the heart,
a thanksgiving to God (and nature for their endowments and the surest token of the full appreciation of their gift, by making of it all they possibly can, is a trait of character essentially and almost exclusively feminine. To appear tastelessly adorned does not require a plethoric purse, or never to be cancelled dry goods account, when lawn can be had at Brother's at fifteen cents and less per yard, and worsted correspondingly cheap.
Indeed to appear poorly or unbecomingly clad is a grievous falling short of duty.

No matter by what intellectual route we propose to travel in order to solve the bread and butter problem, we doubt if the average financier could show a neater stroke of economy than the modern woman does when she visits the vast dry goods emporium on the corner of Whitehall and Mitchell street, and by a master stroke of policy inverts her money in beautiful fabrics at prices which are fabulously below the general market, for are not 1,500 pennies saved the same number earned.

When the matronly type of the modern woman has just returned
